- 2010-2016 Research Assistant, Joint Armenian American Project for the Archaeology and Geography of Ancient Transcaucasian Societies (ArAGATS), Adam T. Smith, (Cornell University), director.
- 2009 Research Assistant, Paul S. Martin Project, Stephen E. Nash (Denver Museum of Nature and Science), director.
- 2007 Junior Research Fellow, Center for Khmer Studies, Siem Riep, Cambodia.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE:

- Ongoing Assistant Professor, Department of Anthropology, Columbia University
- Think like an Archaeologist (UG, 2000-level):
- Introduction to archaeological methods and theory with hands-on assignments
- Living with Animals: Anthropological Perspectives (UG, 3000-level)
- Seminar that explores classic and modern anthropological concerns through texts on a diverse range of human-animal relationships in the present and the past
- Contemporary Archaeological Theory (G, 6000-level)
- Seminar on current theoretical orientations and debates in archaeology

Thing Theory (G, 6000-level)

- Seminar examining the interwoven explorations of materiality in anthropology, archaeology, and STS

Mobilities Past and Present (G, 6000-level)

- Seminar that explores how anthropologists and archaeologists have thought about mobility and the moments in the history of anthropology where mobility has emerged as a central “problem” for anthropologists

Value, Meaning, Objects: Anthropological Approaches (G, 6000-level)

- Seminar that considers how anthropologists have used value as a way to study human social life via the creation, circulation, and consumption of objects and ideas

- 2017 Instructor, Artifacts in the Atomic Age: Isotopes in Archaeology, Stanford Archaeology Center, Stanford University
- 2015 Instructor, Living/Thinking/Doing with Animals: Archaeology of Human-Animal Relationships, self-designed course, Anthropology Department, University of Chicago.
- 2014 Instructor, Self, Culture and Society sequence (1 quarter), Social Sciences Collegiate Division, University of Chicago.
